The president noted that 2021-22 had been another challenging year. However, member numbers remained similar to those recorded pre-COVID. Activities such as members' meetings and outings continued with the modifications required by the prevailing government regulations. Neil acknowledged the hard work done by all COG's volunteers to make this possible and noted the need to build the group of volunteers to share the load, particularly for big projects.

The committee continued to meet and carry out its functions throughout the year, including working on a plan for a new database. Neil advised that he would be able to report on a decision about the solution in early 2023.

The president ended his brief summary with the hope that COG would be able to do more in 2022-23, given the removal of most COVID-related restrictions.
