He noted Canberra Birds' 60th birthday and the formal name change from COG to Canberra Birds, along with the introduction of a new logo. He listed notable projects, the publication of Ethical Birding Guidelines and the updating of Canberra Birds brochures and Canberra Birds' hosting of the Birds Interest Group Network meeting.

Neil acknowledged the work of the committee, the strong contributions of retired and retiring members and the continued representation of Canberra Birds' conservation interests at various forums and groups. Neil also acknowledged the work of non-committee members in providing services for members.

Neil concluded by referring to his involvement and service to COG and Canberra Birds over 50 years of membership. Other matters for which notice has been given

Special Motion: Vesting Surplus Property on Dissolution

COG is obliged to nominate an entity in which to vest surplus property in the unlikely event of COG's dissolution. Accordingly, several organisations were considered as potential nominees and BirdLife Australia was selected and approached as having similar objectives and purposes to that of COG. Importantly, BirdLife Australia agreed to use any funds or assets received from COG to support bird conservation, research and/or education in the ACT and southern NSW. The meeting was asked to endorse the committee's recommendation. See also Appendices A and B.

Moved: Barbara Allen Seconded: Prue Watters.

From the floor Alistair Drake thanked Neil Hermes for his service to COG over many years.

The meeting closed at 20:15.

Appendix A

Canberra Ornithologists Group (COG) Annual General Meeting, November 2024

Special Motion: Vesting Surplus Property on Dissolution

That according to Clause 38 of its Rules of Association the Canberra Ornithologists Group nominate BirdLife Australia to be the entity in which it is to vest surplus property in the event of COG's dissolution or winding up.

Explanatory Note

Clause 38 'Surplus property' of COG's Rules of Association (laid out in Attachment A) requires COG to nominate another organisation to receive COG funds and assets should COG ever be dissolved or wound up. No record can be found of such a nomination having been made following COG's incorporation in August 1987 or since. While dissolution or winding up of COG is highly unlikely to occur, we nevertheless need to make such a nomination.

The nominated organisation is required by the Associations Incorporation Act 1991 of the Australian Capital Territory (see Appendix B) to have its objects substantially the same as COG's objects, not to function with the purpose of securing pecuniary gain for its members, and to have a similar provision to this in its rules to cover its potential dissolution or winding-up. COG's four objectives are:

1. To encourage interest in, and develop knowledge of, the birds of the Canberra region;
2. To promote and co-ordinate the study of birds;
3. To promote the conservation of native birds and their habitats;
4. To establish and maintain a public fund ... for the specific purpose of supporting the association's environmental objects.

After a thorough search, the Committee considered in detail seven candidate conservation and education organisations as potential nominees to receive COG's funds and assets should COG ever be dissolved or wound up. The organisation with the most similar set of purposes to COG and which also fulfilled the other required criteria above was BirdLife Australia.

Following a series of discussions, BirdLife Australia has agreed to receive COG's funds and assets should COG ever be dissolved or wound up. Importantly, BirdLife Australia has also agreed to use any funds or assets received from COG to support bird conservation, research and/or education in the ACT and southern NSW.

Following approval by the Annual General Meeting of this motion, COG and BirdLife Australia will enter into a formal agreement reflecting this arrangement.
